Current Comment

Americans are interested and in the main disappointed at the failure of the efforts of Foreign Minister Briand, of France, in attempting to create the semblance at least, of a United States of Europe. The proposals of M. Briand have met, in most countries, the cool reception which keen observers of European affairs everywhere thought they would receive. There are many reasons for this. Of course the centuries-old conflicting jealousies, nationalistic traditions and differences in language are generally recognized as well-nigh insurmountable barriers. But there are other barriers, too. Many of the European nations have colonies in other parts of the globe and are not sure just how these colonies would be affected by the organization of a United States of Europe. Holland, small, but reaching out over the world, is one of the nations said to be doubtful about this. Spain thinks of her relations with Latin-America, and Great Britain of her far-flung empire which is more important to her future well-being than a United States of Europe. Switzerland is said to fear taking any action which might disturb her time-honored attitude of neutrality and Denmark and other small nations are said to take a similar position. The present feeling in Italy is against the formation of a United States of Europe. In fact, the tendency now seems to be toward the forming of two European alliances and a return to the old system of check and counter check.

Of course one of the most important factors is the attitude of Great Britain. The British people, or a majority of them at least, are said to be less keen about establishing closer relations with Europe now than for a great many years. They are unable to see where their participation in the League, for instance, has been of any considerable benefit for them, and there is said to be a growing sentiment in England for paying less attention to the continent and more to the growing states of the British empire.

For example: It will be remembered that a few weeks ago there was held a conference for the inauguration of some sort of "tariff truce." The conference got nowhere, but did succeed in arousing some suspicion in Canada and Australia. In writing of this conference and of future British policy, F. C. Chappell, writing from London to the Protectionist, said recently:

"It looks very much as if the failure of the conference was a blessing in disguise so far as England is concerned, as the result otherwise would have been to commit this country to a fiscal entaglement with an economic alliance in Europe, an alliance, it has been well said, that owes its origin to the common European fear of the economic power of the United States, and to the desire for an agreement which would act as some sort of a balance to the great internal market of America.

"The United Kingdom has no wish to be mixed up with any such policy. England looks far more to empire trade than to the European continent for the future expansion of her commerce. And she will certainly not enter into any fiscal commitments with European nations which would have the effect of retarding this consumation—viz., the development of the economic and industrial resources of the British Empire. This is a far greater and grander policy than any benefits we might obtain under a United States o fEurope. There can, of course, be no such federation while Britain stands aloof, and this she is likely to do forever."

It is indeed to be regretted for the future peace and prosperity of the world that some sort of a basis cannot be found for the formation of a United States of Europe after the pattern of the United States of America. It is pretty generally recognized everywhere except in Russia, that the United States of America has been a success. And it is undoubtedly the duty of Americans, rather than mixing in European problems, to keep on the job at home, seeing to it that this success of the United States of America is maintained.

So-called progressive leaders shun the idea of a third party, indicating that they think the Republican and Democratic bandwagons are good vehicles to ride on even if they do have to climb down the day after election.

That's practically all.

STEVE MERRILL IN PATHE NEWS REEL AT HESTER THEAT'R

Stephen Merrill Sunday afternoon at 4:30 headed a feature program over KPO. His songs during this half hour of music were "Celeste Aida," the song with which he won second place in the national audition, "Once More," a new song by Lee Roberts, composer of "Smiles," who dedicated his new number to Steve, and "Where'er Ye Walk" and "Londonerry Air." Cal Jackson of Cy Tobbe's concert orchestra, played the accompaniments for Merrill.

Sunday and Monday at the Hester theater in San Jose the movietone newsreel which shows the national audition, will appear on the screen. Everyone who has not seen this feature will have a chance to see it which may not be repeated in this locality.

SEA SCOUTS RATE WELL AT INSPECT'N

The Campbell Sea Scouts held their annual inspection last Thursday night at their quarters in the basement of the Congregational church, which they have fitted with charts, work benches, tools and other gear used in their endeavors.

Inspecting officers were Lieut. H. H. Hallin, U. S. N. R., commissioner of Sea Scouts for this district; A. M. Mortenson, president of the district scout council; Robert Mayer, Sea Scout director, and D. E. McKinley, new scout executive for this district. These men inspected the boys' uniforms, their meeting place, the equipment, conduct of the organization, and found this group in fine training, the condition of their quarters very good, and the members well trained in naval matters. These boys have worked hard and have already received the reward of merit for placing second in national Sea Scout competition.

Worthin and Gene Grattan are to be commended for their work with these boys: Alfred Beer, Harry Bloom, Lloyd Brown, Harris Gardner, Robert Mellish, Tom Hiatt, William Halley, Norman McVea, Ivan Nelson, Perley Payne, Henry Ruthnick, Miles Standish, Alvin Steward and Noel Voge.

THE SPORT FORUM
By DICK LYNDEN

Herbert S. Hazeltine, combination manager and coach of the Stanford tennis team, pondered the question, wet agony dripping from his forehead. Slowly, then, he replied: "Tennis, my friend, is now commonly being reckoned the fifth major collegiate sport, and I might add that the blasphemus levity of your question makes me monstrous angry. Indeed, it is an unkind reflection upon your journalistic skull that you should thus be given to buffoonery. Why, not three days hence (he does talk like the third act of a Shakespearian tragedy), I ventured unto myself a similar inquiry—in fitting gravity, understand—and reached the incontestable conclusion that tenis will very presently press the popularity of football in college circles"

Needless to say, I gasped and spluttered. He merely quaffed several remarkable draughts of Union coffee, and unconcernedly continued: "At first, the really large tennis galleries were a European peculiarity, but lately the game has made tremendous advances in America. Eastern tournaments, and more recently those sponsored in southern California, have kindled new flames of interest. Here at Stanford we have sponsored several important exhibition matches, drawing capacity crowds, and next Thursday (that is, day after tomorrow), when Mrs. Moody, Mrs. Harper, and Mears appear, we shall probably have to turn many away."

I then proceeded to question him on the tennis material at Stanford. "This year, I think, will find Stanford at the top of the conference ladder. Keith Gledhill, a junior, and Ted Easton, are two of the best single players in the state now. Plymire, Coglin and Neiderraurer, ranking in that order in the first five, are all promising youngsters." But I was still dubious. "How about U. S. C.?" I demanded, thinking to cross him. "Doesn't Elsworth Vines play for them?" He smirked loftily. "It is true that Vines is attending there, but being a freshman, he is ineligible. Sydney Wood, who matriculated at Oregon this fall, was also a worry, but he left school shortly after the quarter began. So you see, we are in a very excellent position to realize our championship hopes."

It all sounded curiously plausible. Then I recurred to his initial statement, and, I must confess, rather impertinently, requesting an explanation. "Tennis," he was laboriously patient, "has an

LOCAL QUINTS TRIM LOS GATOS FIVES

The Campbell High school basketball teams are coming to the front with sweeping strides. Friday evening the Campbell five held their place in the league by winning from Los Gatos. The 130 pound team won 24-13 and the unlimited squad took them 36-28. The scores indicate easy victorys but both games were good and not so easily won.

The same night, an independent Campbell quint, calling themselves the "Camels," nosed out the Wildcats by two points, the score being 18-16. This team includes Hallen, rf; Lea, lf; M. DeSelle, c; Lear, rg; Mattus, lg. The team is in the Woodrow Wilson league.

Miss Jessie Lewis and Mrs. F. K. Bartholomew, who has been staying with her since her return from the hospital, will spend the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Harry Mitchell at their home on Toyon avenue, East San Jose.

Five Dollars For Your Whiskers!

WHISKERS, WHISKERS, WHISKERS! Who can raise a crop of spinach between now and Old Settlers Day? If you can—and don't, you're what the lads used to call the last one into the old swimmin' hole. Such is the decree of the folks who are arranging the Feb. 22nd celebration.

As a part of the morning program whiskers will be judged by a competent group of judges, the most luxurious growth of spinach to receive a prize of five dollars. Nobody is barred. If the Smith Brothers come to town they get the breaks, that's all. Some of the lads about town are expected to give grown men a run for their money. Everybody sprout a beard! Provide warm homes for the homeless cooties. Hard times aren't here, but a lot of these little creatures are without homes in spite of that, what with the high mortality rate among local canines, and all.

Here's a chance to show what the climate of the Santa Clara valley can do. Up in Sacramento they claim to be able to raise better whiskers than any other part of the state can produce. Be patriotic! Show these tinhorns that their scraggly beards cannot be compared with the healthy hirsute foliage that can be produced here in less than a month. On with the good work. Grow whiskers—any kind of whiskers. Feed them on the choicest hair growers; cultivate them morning and evening; curl them if you think you must, but for the love you bear your community, GROW SOME WHISKERS! (The ladies, of course, are exempt.)

OLD SETTLERS DAY PROGRAM WILL BE ONE OF THE BEST

At a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce committeemen last night it was revealed that all is nearly in readiness for the annual Old Settlers day which, this year, will be celebrated Monday, Feb. 23, as Washington's Birthday is Sunday, Feb. 22.

The morning program, which starts at 10:30, is well in hand, according to C. H. Whitman, chairman of the committee in charge. They have secured the noted speaker, Rev. J. W. Sherman of the Temple church, San Francisco, to give the morning address. A. A. Thielke, director of music at the local schools will, with the co-operation of D. H. Cramer, be on hand with the high school orchestra and band. A quartet, not yet selected, will sing several numbers.

Noon Dinner

The auxiliary to the Orchard City Grange, according to Mrs. S. N. Hedegard, is preparing to serve at least 300 noon dinners in the grammar school cafeteria. The charge will be nominal, and the doors to the "caf" will open at 12 and remain open as long as diners keep coming.

Something New

The committee in charge of the afternoon program, H. C. Smith, chairman, anounces something new. Efforts are being made to secure delegations of old timers from various parts of the county to be on hand with a local speaker or speakers who will tell something of the early days in these communities. To date several towns have replied favorably to Mr. Smith's request, and a representative group is expected to be present. The afternoon program will be in the hands of these old settlers. At the close of the program there will be an informal reception and a baseball game. Tony Ferro, manager of the local club, is arranging the details of the game, any proceeds from which

PUNDITAS DISCUSS EARLY ACTIVITIES OF FEDERATION

A very interesting meeting of the Pundita Circle was held at the home of Mrs. George Burrow at her home on San Tomas road Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. Geo. Page, president, presided over the business meeting.

Miss Helah Laird was in charge of the program, which opened with the singing of "Federation Day" by the members. Mrs. L. J. Carboni wrote the words to the chorus of the song.

Mrs. L. B. Davidson read a few paragraphs from "Business and Protective Law" by Mab Copeland Lineman. Miss Laird then read an article from "Records of Twenty-Five Years of California Federation of Women's Clubs" by Mary Gibson. This article was on the founding of the general fereration. Mrs. J. J. Pardee read from the same book "Pioneers in Club Work" and the "Division of California Into District Federations."

Mrs. L. J. Carboni gave an interesting report on the district federation meeting recently held in San Francisco.

Refreshments and a social hour were enjoyed after the business meeting. Next meeting with Mrs. A. C. Anderson Feb. 5

BRIDGE PARTY AT LEIGH HOME

Mrs. George Leigh was hostess to the members of her bridge club at a luncheon Wednesday at her home on Leigh avenue.

Green holders with pink tapers, and bouquets of pink sweet peas with ferns were the centerpieces for the luncheon table.

Following luncheon the afternoon was enjoyably spent at cards, where high score was held by Mrs. W. H. Gullick, while Mrs. L. E. Hendricks held low score.

Guests included Mesdames W. H. Gullick, L. E. Hendrick, E. C. Young, E. C. Price, F. O. Bohnett, Maynard Knopf and A. Drysdale.

Remarkable Report on the Prohibition Problem Made by the Wickersham Commission—J. A. Farrell Says Prosperity Is Coming Back.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

George W. Wickersham

NEITHER drys nor wets can derive any wholehearted satisfaction from the report of the Wickersham law enforcement commission, which was handed to President Hoover and by him transmitted to congress. Nor is it conceivable that the commission itself can have any great pride in the bulky document. The one wholly honest member appears to be Monte Lemann of New Orleans, who refused to sign the majority report. The other ten attached their names to it and gave out statements showing that no one of them agreed with its findings in their entirety.

This majority report is against repeal of the Eighteenth amendment, and, admitting that prohibition has not been enforced or observed, recommends that it be given further trial, with an enlarged force of agents. Removal of the restrictions on the prescription of medicinal liquor by physicians is advised. If the dry amendment is to be revised at all, the commission is agreed on certain phraseology which would empower congress to deal with the liquor traffic as it sees fit. Modification of the Volstead act so as to permit the manufacture and sale of light wines and beer is opposed.

In a separate report the plan for revision giving congress the power to regulate or prohibit the manufacture and sale of liquor was set forth in detail by Henry W. Anderson of Virginia, and it was signed by Commissioners Anderson, Kenyon, Loesch, Pound, McCormick and Mackintosh.

Statements of the individual commissioners appended to the general report showed that of the eleven members, six consider it hopeless to expect that prohibition can be made to prohibit. Two of these six—former Secretary of War Newton D. Baker of Ohio and Prof. Monte M. Lemann of Tulane university, Louisiana—advocate repeal of the Eighteenth amendment. The other four of these six—Mr. Anderson, Ada L. Comstock, president of Radcliffe college; Frank J. Loesch of Chicago, and Dean Roscoe Pound of Harvard law school—favor immediate revision of the Eighteenth amendment to confer the power of regulation on congress.

Five of the members—Chairman George W. Wickersham, United States Judges William S. Kenyon, Paul J. McCormick and William I. Grubb, and former Chief Justice K. M. Mackintosh of the Washington Supreme court—stood out for a further trial. Judges Kenyon, Mackintosh and McCormick said that if the further experiment failed they would favor adoption of the Anderson plan of national regulation of liquor.

In transmitting the report to congress, President Hoover said he was in accord with its stand against repeal of the dry amendment, and added: "I do, however, see serious objections to, and therefore must not be understood as recommending the commission's proposed revision of the Eighteenth amendment which is suggested by them for possible consideration at some future time if the continued effort at enforcement should not prove successful."

Senator John J. Blaine of Wisconsin was quick to introduce a modification amendment on the general lines of the plan offered by Commissioner Anderson but confining congressional power to regulation of liquor traffic. Like the Anderson scheme, it would permit each state to decide whether it desires prohibition or a government-controlled liquor supply.

Calvin Coolidge

STANDING by his conviction that the funds of the Red Cross should be obtained by private subscription, President Hoover has named a committee of leading citizens to push the drive for $10,000,000 for the relief of the drought sufferers. Calvin Coolidge, his predecessor, has accepted the honorary chairmanship of this body, and Al Smith, his opponent in 1928, is a vice president, as are John W. Davis, Democratic candidate for the Presidency in 1924; Gen. John J. Pershing, and Abel Davis of Chicago. John Barton Payne, head of the Red Cross, is the active chairman of the committee.

In a letter to those invited to serve on the committee the President said that "It is essential that we should maintain the sound American tradition and spirit of voluntary aid in such emergency and should not undermine that spirit which has made our Red Cross the outstanding guardian of our people in time of disaster. . . . The American way of meeting such a relief problem has been through voluntary effort and for many years this effort has been centered in the American Red Cross, created by the people themselves to act in just such emergencies."

OBSTRUCTIONIST tactics in the senate delayed the Interior department bill, to which had been appended the $25,000,000 appropriation for the Red Cross for food but the measure was passed. The senate also had further relief plans. The agriculture committee approved a measure to donate 20,000,000 bushels of farm board wheat to feed the hungry, the cost of the grain to be credited to the board's revolving fund; and the appropriation committee added to a pending deficiency bill $20,000,000 for immediate public improvements.

Wet members of the house engaged in a filibuster against prohibition enforcement appropriations, attacking especially funds for employment of informers, for purchase of liquor evidence and for tapping the telephone wires of suspected law violators.

ELIHU ROOT appeared before the senate foreign relations committee and eloquently defended the protocols for American adherence to the World court which he negotiated. His arguments were forcible and his replies to questions seemed adequate, but his address did not appear to have much effect on Senators Borah, Moses and Johnson, members of the committee and opponents of adherence even with the senate's reservations.

J. A. Farrell

BUSINESS in the United States is now on the upgrade, the peak of the financial depression was passed before the beginning of the year, and the prospects for restored industrial prosperity are good. Such, at least, is the opinion of James A. Farrell, president of the United States Steel corporation as expressed in an address to the National Canners and the National Wholesale Grocers' associations in joint convention in Chicago. He deprecated the suggestions of revision of inter-allied war debts as a measure of relief, and urged that we do the things that we can. "Let us cut down the volume of undigested talk that rarely helps but always hampers," he said.

Granting that unemployment is considerable and that the national income has been reduced, the steel magnate contended it was essential for prosperity to maintain the purchasing power of the working classes, adding: "It is my deliberate judgment that a general reduction of wages in this country would set back the impending recovery by at least two years."

The agricultural situation Mr. Farrell described as a most serious one. But, he said, no lasting gain will be made for agriculture by resort to "quack nostrums and unsound economics."

Sen. Capper

PRICES of bread, sugar and other foodstuffs are being investigated, on order of the senate, by an agricultural subcommittee of which Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas is chairman. Senators Wagner of New York and Brookhart of Iowa, who were the authors of the resolution calling for the inquiry, first appeared before the committee and explained their views and their reasons for thinking current prices to be excessive.

Afterwards representatives of the big bread baking companies and other tradesmen were called in to tell the facts as they see them and to justify, if they could, the maintenance of present prices of bread in view of the low price of wheat.

KEEP away from Las Vegas, is the warning to jobless workers who seek employment on the Boulder dam project given out by Labor, the official organ of railroad labor organizations. The paper says:

"Despite the fact that contracts on the $165,000,000 government project have not been awarded, Las Vegas has been flooded with thousands of jobless and destitute men. Hundreds of these unfortunate job seekers were deceived by rosette reports circulated by unscrupulous employment agencies, in the opinion of Francis I. Jones, general director of the United States employment service.

"Capt. Robert M. Griffin of the Salvation army at Las Vegas recently declared that Las Vegas has the longest bread line in the United States, according to population. More than 7,000 jobless workers were given aid by the Salvation army in one month, Captain Griffin reports."

The first contracts for Boulder dam will not be awarded until March and men who insist on going there in search of employment are advised by the United States employment service to be prepared to take care of themselves for at least four months.

REPRESENTATIVE FISH'S house committee on Communist activities has reported, recommending strengthening the laws which would enable the authorities to curb those activities in the United States. The Russian Soviet press heaps ridicule on the report, declaring it is impudent and insolent and that it indicates the "fright of the bourgeoisie" that the Soviet republic will succeed in its industrialization plan.

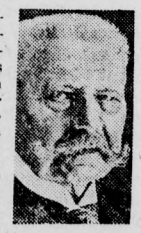
Soviet officials announce that Russia is about to resume the dumping of grain on the world markets, her supply largely exceeding the needs of the Russian people.

Admiral Mark Bristol

PACIFISTS and advocates of adequate national defense came together in Washington in the sixth national conference on the cause and cure of war. The big meeting was attended by more than 600 delegates from 44 states, and was held under the auspices of 11 national women's organizations whose aim in this respect is to complete the demobilization of what they call "the war machine." One of the speakers on the program was Rear Admiral Mark Bristol, chairman of the executive committee of the navy general board; and his arguments for defense were ably seconded by Admiral William V. Pratt, chief of naval operations, and Edward P. Warner, former assistant secretary of the navy in charge of aeronautics. Among the pacifist speakers were Miss Jane Addams of the International League for Peace and Freedom, and Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt.

DISPATCHES from Gevena say that the central opium board of the League of Nations was compelled, by objections from representatives of France and Yugoslavia, to delete from its report caustic criticism of the "abnormal" narcotics consumption in Japan and France, the inference being that drugs supposedly for medical purposes had escaped from regular channels and been made available to the illicit dope dealers. The expurgated report read to the league council merely mentioned "certain countries," but at the asme time unfolded to the council the fact that seizures of opium illicitly transported were now in tons where heretofore they had been in ounces.

The league commission to study Briand's United States of Europe scheme decided, after a warm debate, to invite Russia, Turkey and Iceland to participate in the discussions of the economic phases of the plan when it is taken up again probably next May. The invitation to the Soviet government was insisted upon especially by Dino Grandi of Italy and Julius Curtius of Germany.



President Von Hindenburg

PAUL VON HINDENBURG, president of the German republic, was the chief figure in the enthusiastic celebration of the sixtieth anniversary of German unity; and the eighty-three-year-old warrier seemed almost as vigorous as he must have been on January 18, 1871, when as a lieutenant he stood in the Hall of Mirrors at Versailles and heard Bismarck proclaim the federated states of Germany an empire.

The ceremonies in Berlin opened with a solemn assembly of all members of the government in the reichstag where Chancellor Bruening made an appeal for mutual understanding and repeated Bismarck's pledge that the nation would seek wealth through peace, not war. Then President von Hindenburg attended a reunion in the Berlin Sportpalast where about 12,000 former officers and soldiers gathered.

HAVING adopted a skeletonized plan for giving India dominion status, the round table conference in London adjourned with most of the delegates satisfied. However, the Gandhi adherents in India are not at all pleased with the scheme and immediately began attacking it in various ways. National congress newspapers denounce it as a system of camouflaged independence designed to provide safeguards for Great Britain.

BAREHEADED and wearing ordinary street clothes, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh went to a gathering of distinguished officials and diplomats in Washington and received from the hands of Ambassador Claudel of France the cross of commander of the Legion of Honor.

In presenting the cross, Ambassador Claudel said the westward flight of Coste and Bellonte last September was a success largely because Lindbergh had mapped the transatlantic course. It was in recognition of this service to the two Frenchmen as well as his own record-making flight that the medal was awarded, he said.

Among those at the presentation were Secretary Adams, Senator Morrow, Lindbergh's father-in-law, and Chairman Wickersham of the law enforcement commission.

international aspect, something which football never will have, and certainly something which basketball and baseball can scarcely hope for in the immediate future. It is a game in which co-ordination, speed and strategy are prime requisites, more so than in any other sport unless it be golf. These attributes cannot be long denied, which is the entire point of my discourse." A certain definite finality about that; I knew the interview had drawn to a close, and it was with considerable reluctance that I trundled off.

Jack Dempsey, who is old enough to know better, announces through semi-official quarters that he will fight this summer for any promoter who will lay $500,000 on the mahogany for him. Aside from the preposterous monetary demand, the thing is out of the question and reeks of balyhoo. It is very doubtful if Dempsey could go three rounds without a cane.

Max Baer, the ambitious Livermore cowpolk, has signed to meet Tommy Loughran in New York Feb. 6. Although Loughran is concededly on the down grade, having been flattened by Sharkey and decisioned by Schaaf, he will cause Baer no end of trouble since he is a clever boxer and since Baer has an annoying habit of leading with his chin. Loughran should win easily over the full distance.

U. C. L. A. regained leadership in the Pacific Coast conference with a 25-16 triumph over U. S. C. while Stanford, after five consecutive years of defeat, humbled the Bears in an extra period 37-32. It was California's first defeat this season.

Whiskers, Whiskers, Whiskers

Publicity is being arranged by Guy Farley, Herold Morton and R. H. Knappen. The county will be placarded, newspaper publicity secured, and banners or other signs placed at the main highway entrances to town. As an added attraction the publicity boys are staging a whiskerino contest, to close at the morning program on the big day.

Dance, Maybe

The final decision resting with the Grange, there may be an "old time" dance here the Saturday evening immediately preceding the Old Settlers day celebration. The staging of such a dance would, in the opinion of the committee, be well worth while, lending to the time a sort of "three-day" holiday spirit.

Present at the meeting last night were Mr. and Mrs. H. N. Shadle, Mr. and Mrs. S. N. Hedegard, T. A. Cutting, H. C. Smith, Herold Morton, George Robson, C. H. Whitman and R. H. Knappen.

HISTORY'S MYSTERIES

Unsolved Riddles That Still Puzzle Authorities Here and Abroad

Who Was the Chevalier St. George?

WHAT little is known of this royal personage—or this royal imposition, so many historians maintain—is comprised in the annals of the British court just previous to the accession of William and Mary and in the personal gossip and individual reports of a number of persons some years later—for the "Chevalier St. George" is even more of a mystery than the dauphin of France, the Man in the Velvet Mask or James Ord. At least, it is a matter of history, that these personages existed, while it is by no means certain that the true Chevalier St. George was ever born.

His supposed birth occurred at that period in English history when the duke of York succeeded Charles II with the title of James II, and immediately made himself extremely unpopular by espousing the church of Rome in spite of the act which forever barred Catholics from the throne of England. It was because of this that James' eldest child, Mary, a Protestant, with her husband, William of Orange, were invited to cross the channel and "rescue the laws and religions of England."

A few months previous to this, however, it was announced that the queen was about to give birth to another child, but when the boy was born, or, at least, presented to the court, it was freely stated that the queen had been a party to an attempted swindle and that no child had been recently born to her at all. This report, as Macaulay declares, gained ground because of the fact that "a number of persons who were particularly entitled to be present and whose testimony would have satisfied all minds accessible to reason were absent."

But, in spite of the doubt which existed as to the royal parentage of the infant, there could be no doubt, whatever, that a male child was christened James Francis Edward Stuart, later to become known as the Chevalier St. George, and destined, in time, to be the father of "Bonnie Prince Charlie," the young Pretender.

But, returning to the mystery which cloaks the origin of the Chevalier St. George, we find that there lived in England at the time a certain Sir Theophilus Oglethorpe, who had been brigadier general and under equerry to James II, and who had been forced to flee to France because he refused to serve against his former master. In Sir Theophilus' family were two daughters, Anne and Eleanor, who, during the time the family spent in France, were reared as Catholics and befriended the exiled king. Later when their father was permitted to return to England and resume his seat in parliament after taking an oath of allegiance to King William, Anne and Eleanor Oglethorpe also returned, but because of their Catholicism, it was necessary that they remain in hiding. Accordingly they passed as "friends of Lady Oglethorpe," instead of being publicly recognized as her daughters.

Among the young women who came to the house to do sewing was a certain Frances Shaftoe who was frankly curious as to the true identity of the two young "friends of the family," and finally succeeded, not only in discovering their secret, but in arriving at what many historians claim is the true account of the identity of the Chevalier St. George. The story which Frances Shaftoe overheard and which she later gave to the world with a wealth of corroborative detail, was that the infant Prince James had died a few hours after his birth and that Lady Oglethorpe had at the time hurried to London with her own son, only a few days old, the child being substituted for the dead prince.

The details of this account were made public some five years later when Anne Oglethorpe was arrested and tried on a charge of having aided in the imprisonment of Frances Shaftoe in order that the latter might not divulge her brother's secret. The case against Miss Oglethorpe was dismissed, but the attempts of the Chevalier St. George to prove his claim to the British throne were thereafter treated with amusement, rather than formal consideration, though the Shaftoe woman's story has never been substantiated and the mystery as to the real identity of the Chevalier St. George remains unpenetrated to this day.

Fire Engine on Tracks

Flat tires have never stopped the fire department on Park Point, across the United States ship canal from Duluth. For 25 years a trolley car fire engine has clanged its way over the street railway tracks to answer fire alarms. The unique fire department was introduced after a boathouse blaze caused a loss of $62,000. The city pays the street car company $30 a month for use of its tracks, and the tram fire crew consists of two fire fighters and a motorman.

Quit Growling

There have always been flappers. They have always been scolded. And 99 per cent of them become lovely, wholesome women. We wonder why there is so much scolding in the world. The young folks always turn out well. And nearly every obnoxious condition soon blows over. We believe humanity criticizes itself too much.—Atchison Globe.

Three bulls in the arena at Mexico City the other day surrendered to Sidney Franklyn, the Brooklyn bullfighter, without putting up a fight. Maybe they thought he was a Wall street bear.

It is surprising how many preachers there are in action right now who believe that it would be better for us to join the league court than to get religion.

The trouble with an era of low prices is that few people outside the wealthy have the money to take advantage of the low prices. Prosperity and rising prices always seem to go together.

A Denver man, in a bridge game, shot his partner for trumping his ace and learned too late that thte partner had held 18 trumps and couldn't help it. After this perhaps he will not be so impetuous.

Bank Bandits Active

The greatest number of bandit raids on American banking ever recorded in the figures of the protective department of the American Bankers Association were reported during the six months ending last February. Bank members of the association reported for investigation 311 forgery cases, 107 holdup robberies, 16 burglaries, 2 sneak thefts and 8 mortgage swindles while non-member banks, numbering less than half the total enrolled in the association, suffered 86 holdup robberies and 9 burglaries, nonmembers being burglarized or held up once for every 89 banks, as compared with once for every 164 member banks. The association detective agents caused the arrest of 143 of the 236 bank criminals apprehended during the period covered.

The association's report on these conditions urges support of the movement to provide city police departments with radio-equipped cruising automobiles which have proved particularly effective in Cleveland and Detroit in the broadcasting of alarms and the closing in on criminals immediately after or even in the midst of the perpetration of crimes. Last year the average time elapsed between the receipt of radio calls by these cars and the 1325 arrests which followed was one minute and forty-two seconds, the report says.

KIWANIS NOTES
By Heck

"This is the life," said the sportsman, and that is as true as gospel. The life of a real sport is surely an ideal one, and Fred Saxton of San Jose gave a very interesting talk on sportsmanship in the service club, hsowing the real benefits gained to the individual through such organizations.

The great aim of clubs is the sum-total of achievements and not the individual feat. Teamwork and not the individual player in service clubs as well as football accomplishes the great objectives and this team work is only best obtained through the better understanding of your fellow players. This better understanding is best cultivated in the everyday life through the agencies of the many service clubs.

Walter Bachrodt, city superintendent of San Jose schools, will speak at the club luncheon next Tuesday, on the state legislation relative to schools. Supt. I. R. Abbott will wield the birch.

Frank Hart of Anoka, Minn., a guest of A. A. and M. E. Purmort, was making up his Kiwanis attendance at the local club today.
